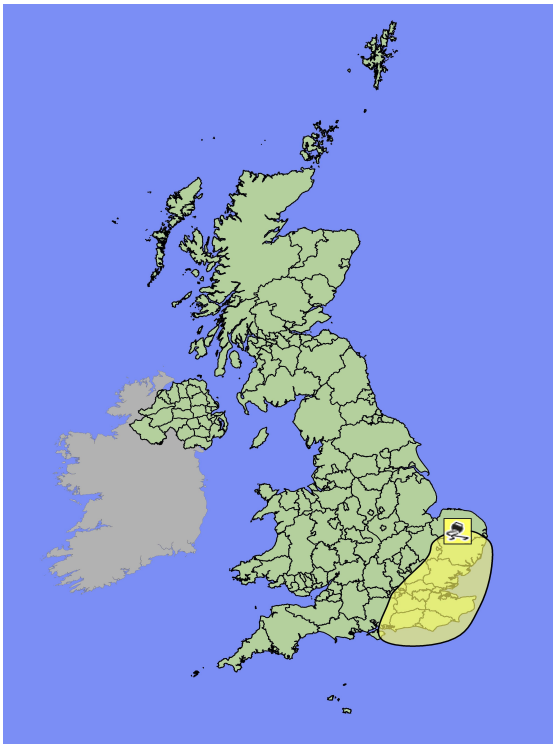
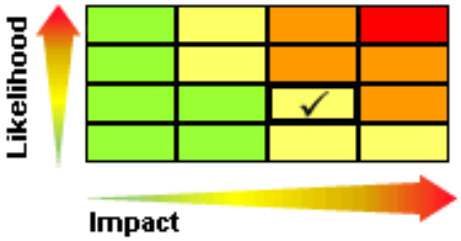
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Freezing rain will be a hazard in some places across southeast England during this morning, leading to black ice on roads and pavements.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 09:35 on Sun, 12th Feb 2012 until 12:30 on Sun, 12th Feb 2012

Icy conditions are likely through Sunday morning, as outbreaks of freezing rain affect southeast England. Some snow is also possible to the southeast of London, with a covering of 1 to 2 cm possible in places. As this area of precipitation drifts southwestwards, areas to the southwest of London, perhaps as far as the Isle of Wight, will also see a risk of freezing rain.

The public is advised to take extra care when traveling through Sunday morning, but with less cold weather steadily following from the north, conditions should ease this afternoon.
